STORY OF TWO FROGS

Two frogs named Bill and Jack lived in a delightful muddy pool at the edge of a meadow. Now, Bill was the best frog in the pool, and Jack was the naughtiest. Perhaps that was the reason that they were not very fond of each other and never played leapfrog together.

Now, one of the strictest rules of the pool was that whenever the young froglets heard any one coming they were all to dive down in the depths of the pool and to stay there as long as they possibly could, and venture to the surface again only with the utmost caution. So when one day the noise of cracking twigs warned the frogs of the approach of somebody or something, what was Bill's amazement to see Jack continue sitting serenely on a large flat rock in the middle of the pond making no attempt to follow the rest of the frogs to safety at the bottom of the pool. Bill was so astonished that he himself stopped and stared at Jack.

"Aren't you coming?" he asked. "No indeed," replied Jack. "I'm too old for such nonsense; besides I want to see what these strange creatures who are coming through the bushes are like."

"But you must come," stammered Bill, agitated at his comrade's coolness. "It is the strictest rule of the pool." "I shan't!" replied Jack, snapping his mouth shut just as if he had caught a fly.

Now, Bill felt that it would not do to leave Jack to his fate, so he quickly swam to the rock on which the obstinate frog was sitting and, climbing on it, proceeded to reason with him.

But Jack would not listen to reason, while Bill became so absorbed in his own eloquence that he completely forgot the cause of it. Consequently the first thing they knew they heard swish in the air above them and a large crab net descended upon the rock, completely enveloping them in its meshes. The two frogs kicked valiantly, but it did no good. They were caught and fast.

The two boys, for it was two boys, who had made the commotion in the underbrush, were delighted, but the frogs felt differently and were angry but pleased when the boys shook them out of the net into a covered basket which they had brought with them.

Then while the boys sat down on the bank in the hope that more frogs would come to the surface, Bill and Jack covered in the basket and wondered what was going to happen next. They had not long to wait for, finding the frogs in that particular pool extremely bashful, the boys picked up their baskets and started for fresh streams.

Soon they halted by a clear pool in which flowed a merry little brook, and settling down their basket they tiptoed cautiously about the edge of the pool looking for more frogs.

Soon they spied a large green fellow fast asleep on a log in the sun, and seizing the crab net they approached. But just as they had almost caught him he woke and splashed into the depths of the pool. The boys made a desperate strike at him with the crab net, and in doing so they upset the basket containing the two frogs into the water. Off flew the cover and into the pool tumbled Bill and Jack, highly astonished, but glad to be back in the water again.

The boys, however were so disgusted with the way their frogging party had turned out that they picked up their empty basket and went home determined to spend the rest of the afternoon fishing.

When the last sounds of their footsteps had died away the two frogs poked their noses out of the water, but it was some time before they thought it safe to do more than that. At last, however, they ventured out and cautiously hopped home, where they were greeted with amazement and delight by the rest of the frogs. From that day on instead of keeping away from each other, Bill kept Jack out of mischief, and Jack kept Bill out of being dull, and they were happier than ever and came to regard their misadventure as the beginning of all good things.

FAST ROAD BUILDING

ALLEN COUNTY CITIZENS REPAIR AND MAKE 20 MILES OF ROAD IN A DAY.

Lima, O., June 15.—Five hundred citizens of the village of Spencerville, with 100 teams, 10 steam tractors, more than a score of automobile trucks and numbers of road graders and scarifiers, built 20 miles of highway between 7:30 a. m. and 5:30 p. m. Four miles of every road leading into the village were repaired.

At night two tons of fish were served to the workers on the main street of the town, 500 ice cream cones were given the children and a band played.

Two hundred pounds of powder were used in one big flash to photograph the workers and part of one of the roads.

WOMAN SHOTS NEGRO

FIRES THROUGH DOOR PANEL AS INTRUDER ATTEMPTS TO ENTER HOUSE.

Sandusky, O., June 15.—Police are looking for a negro who was shot in the foot by Mrs. Schneike while trying to gain an entrance to the home of Albert Schneike, contractor, on Perry-st. They followed a trail of blood to a clump of marsh grass in East Sandusky, where it was lost by the pursuers.

When the negro attempted to insert a skeleton key into the lock on the front door Mrs. Schneike fired through one of the panels. A howl was followed by a curse as the marauder fled.

TOLEDO CONFRONTED WITH MURDER MYSTERY

Body of Well Dressed Young Woman Found on Street; Believe She Was Killed in Auto.

Toledo, June 15.—Toledo police and Lucas county officials faced a murder mystery here in the finding in the middle of Broadway, in the heart of the business section, of the body of a beautiful young woman, aged about 25, stylishly dressed and wearing two large diamond rings.

Death was caused by a blow, probably delivered by a man's fist, in the opinion of Coroner Hendler. The coroner found two bruises on the body. One, about two inches long, is over the right breast and the other is over the left eye.

The coroner believes a man, who may have been the woman's companion, quarreled with her and struck her on the breast, killing her instantly. The bruise over the eye he believes she sustained when she fell to the pavement after the blow had been struck.

That robbery was not the motive of the slayer is shown by the fact that her diamonds were undisturbed. The body was found about 2 o'clock in the morning by Dr. W. W. Brand, who was driving along Broadway in his automobile on his way home after making a night call. It lay within three feet of the street car track, but had not been struck by a car. He removed the body to the county morgue.

The woman carried a purse, but it contained no money. The only possible clue to her identity is a card found in her purse which bore the business address of C. Sandhegger & Co., distillers, 123 E. Court-st., Cincinnati.

Dr. Brand declared that when he found the body the woman probably had been dead about 20 minutes. Rigor mortis had not set in.

A street car crew which passed the point where the body was found three minutes before Dr. Brand located it asserted to Coroner Hendler that there was nobody there when they passed. This caused the police to think that the woman was murdered in an automobile and the body thrown out.

The mystery of the young woman whose body was found on the pavement on Broadway was partially cleared when it was identified as that of Miss Nellie Stoelstra, 22, Grand Rapids, Mich. The identification was made by the girl's sister, Mrs. Charles K. Quinn of this city. Mrs. Quinn says Miss Stoelstra left home early in the evening to attend a picture show with several girls.

Winter temperature of Cuba ranges from 60 to 85 degrees.

Mr. Preston years ago published the Sunday Morning News in Youngstown, but larger fields beckoned him and before going to New York a dozen or more years ago for several years published papers in Chicago and Kansas City. In the world's largest city he is doing mighty well. With him on his visit to Canfield Sunday were his brother-in-law, S. M. Raymond, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Warner and Ross Raymond, all of Youngstown.

DEMOCRATS OPEN THEIR BIG MEET

Convention at St. Louis Is Called to Order by National Committeeman McCombs.

GLYNN TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN

Former Governor of New York Seeks the Party Keynote, Dwelling Especially on Wilson's Success in Avoiding War.

St. Louis, June 14.—The Democratic national convention was called to order this morning in the Coliseum by William F. McCombs, chairman of the national committee, and entered on its formal business promptly and smoothly. The hall, which was quite elaborately decorated with the American flags and with bunting, was filled to more than the limit of its seating capacity, despite the fact that several thousand additional seats had been provided by the construction of a mezzanine balcony.

As the members of the national committee and the delegations took their places there was a hearty applause for the many notables whom the audience was quick to recognize. Several members of the cabinet and, of course, many United States senators were among these distinguished attendants.

When Sergeant-at-Arms John I. Martin and his assistants had brought about quiet in the big assemblage, Chairman McCombs stepped forward, gavel in hand, and was given a hearty round of applause. He formally declared the convention opened, and after the divine blessing had been invoked and the call for the convention read Mr. McCombs announced the selection of Martin H. Glynn, former governor of New York, as temporary chairman.

Mr. Glynn is an eloquent and forceful speaker, and in setting forth the issues of the campaign as the Democratic party sees them he evoked the frequent cheers of his audience. Especially did he emphasize the success of President Wilson's policy in keeping the American nation from being embroiled in the European war. The policy the president has pursued, he asserted, is the same that has been followed by many of his predecessors, from Washington down, who by skillful diplomacy avoided war without sacrificing the nation's honor. Instance after instance he cited, and said: "To maintain our national honor by peace if we can, by war if we must, is the motto of the president of the United States."

This led the speaker to the subject of preparedness, and in this connection he claimed the present administration has done more for our army and our navy than any administration in our history. Preparedness for defense, he said, was what the Democratic party advocated.

Turning to the matter of Americanism, Mr. Glynn asserted that the convention must make it plain that all divisions among the American people end at the ocean's edge, and that the world must be made to know that we are a united people. "High above every other issue that this convention offers to the American people," he said, "we must therefore write a vindication of American loyalty."

The chairman then took up the subject of domestic policies, and briefly set forth what he called the great landmarks which chart the change from government for the fortunate few to an even-handed government in the interest of all, credit for which he gave to the present administration. These included the federal reserve act, the creation of a trade commission and the Underwood tariff law, which, he declared, is the best and fairest ever enacted.

Mr. Glynn closed with an impassioned eulogy of President Wilson, predicting that when the history of these days of war is written his name will represent the triumph of American principles over the hosts of darkness and of death.

Formal business occupied the time of the rest of the first session, and the convention was then adjourned until Thursday.

"Golden Lane" of Suffragists.

The spectacular feature of the day was the unique demonstration made by the army of women suffragists. This took the form of a "walkless parade," the women, thousands of them, standing in lines on both sides of Locust street, down which the delegates proceeded from their headquarters to the Coliseum. This was called the "Golden Lane," from the colors of the suffragists, and, though the demonstration was talkless as well as walkless, its proportions and the evident earnestness of the great number of women taking part seemed to have its due effect on the delegates. Every woman in the long lines wore a yellow sash and carried a yellow parasol. The climax of the women's demonstration was a tableau at the old Art Museum, where Liberty stood on a pedestal in the center of a pyramid of beauteous ladies.
